

BRITTANY BRATHWAITE

Brittany Brathwaite is the Research Officer of the BEC. Having attained BSC in Labour and Employment Relations, she is currently pursuing a Masters degree in the same topic.

Her portfolio of successful projects include researching and writing policy documents, contributing to “The Red Book: A Guide to Employment Relations in Barbados”, as well as writing guidance notes on emerging issues for employers. Additionally she is a regular contributor to the Barbados Business Authority on employment related matters. Her areas of focus have included HIV/AIDS in the workplace, flexible work arrangements and termination procedures. Although being research focused, Brittany frequently provides advice on labour legislation, and aids in the design of training programs to meet recognized needs. She also manages the BEC’s social media portals, providing the general public with international, regional and national labour related updates.

Prior to her role at the BEC, Brittany was employed the Barbados Statistical Service as a Clerical Officer, specifically attached to the CENSUS 2010 unit and served as a Customer Service Representative, and Human Resources intern with CIBC First Caribbean International Bank.
